

catalyst

Something that brings about
change by its mere presence

lucrative

Brings in a significant amount of money

proficient

Skilled or practiced

opulent

Richness
taken almost
to excess

munificent

Giving
generous gifts
of money or goods

facilitate

To make simple or easy

delegate

to assign responsibility to someone else

corroborate

To confirm or support, often
using additional evidence or examples

exonerate

To free from
blame

capitulate

To give up, or
to stop resisting
pressure

analogous

Bearing some resemblance
or proportion

anomaly

Something out
of the ordinary,
unusual, and
strange

dichotomy

Something that is split into two, where each separate part has nothing in common with the other

fallacious

False,
misleading,
or deceptive

verisimilitude

An
appearance
of truth

consensus

General
agreement

precedent

Something that has occurred or been decided on in the past that is used to influence an action or decision in the present

antithesis

Something having absolutely nothing in common with the other

vacillate

To be unable to settle on a choice, to be indecisive irrevocable

Impossible to revoke, or take back implement

To put into practice

intrinsic

So entwined
and essential
that it cannot be separated

inexorable

Relentless or unstoppable

impeccable

Without any flaws or errors

incorrigible

Not
correctable

trivial

Having little value or
significance

dubious

Questionable
or open to doubt

nominal

In name only
- a token
amount

surreptitious

Sneaky,
stealthy, furtive,
or hidden

tenuous

Flimsy,
fragile, or not
substantial